

Kidnaped Girl Says She Was Held as Slave

Face Charge of Cruelty

Sixteen-year-old Josephine Costanzo, brought back to Jersey City by detectives who found her on a farm near Stroudsburg, Pa., after the girl had written to her father begging him to rescue her, told the Jersey City police yesterday that she had been kidnaped and held on the farm for nine months. She was worked hard by her captors, who said, and beaten or locked up on the slightest excuse. She is the daughter of Morris Costanzo, of 273 Grove Street, Jersey City.

The girl was going to a store in Jersey City last November when she was approached by a middle-aged woman who invited her to take a short ride. The girl told the detectives the woman was so pleasant that she acceded and was riding into the country on a Lackawanna Railroad train.

Her Name Changed
When we passed Peterson, N. J., the girl said, "I told the woman that we were not taking a short ride but a long one. She said we had got on the wrong train."

At Stroudsburg, the girl continued, the woman took her to a hotel, where they remained over night. In the morning the woman's husband, John Dehrand, the girl said, called at the hotel with a horse and carriage and drove to a farm on the outskirts of the city. When they arrived, Dehrand told her that her name henceforth would be Josephine Bennett, she said.

The girl said she was put to work immediately at household chores. She was forced to work from 9 o'clock in the morning until late into the night. She claims she was told to "forget home." Once when caught writing a letter to her parents, she was taken into a shed and beaten severely, she charges. Mrs. Dehrand beat her, she charged, while the husband held his hands over her mouth to stifle her screams.

The girl, in her story to Captain Frank Bennett, of the Jersey City Detective Bureau, said that Mrs. Dehrand tried to persuade her to have her hair clipped and wear a wig, so she would not be recognized. She added that she was not permitted to attend church and never was given money for her labors.

Prosecution Promised
Josephine related how she became friendly with a little girl on a nearby farm and intrusted her with a letter she had concealed in her clothing for more than three months. The letter explained her plight to her father and begged him not to come for her alone.

When Detective Edward Davis, of Jersey City, and relatives of the girl arrived at the Pennsylvania farm they were met by Dehrand, who denied the presence of the girl. Then Josephine rushed down the stairs and revealed herself. She was brought back to Jersey City yesterday and signed an affidavit to substantiate her charges. The police announced they would charge Mrs. Dehrand with kidnaping and apply to the Pennsylvania authorities for her extradition to Jersey City. A charge of cruelty may be lodged against both Dehrand and his wife, they added.

Chicago Woman Insists She Received Quantities While Under Treatment

Special Dispatch to The Tribune
CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—Federal narcotic agents to-day announced that an investigation of hospital practice in the treating of drug addicts would result from circumstances in the case of Mrs. Mabel Rockwell Schaeffer, "English heiress," arrested Friday in a raid at 2222 South Dearborn Street.

Mrs. Schaeffer told of the quantities of drugs she has received while under hospital treatment. At the Illinois General Hospital, where Mrs. Schaeffer recently received treatment, it was said that she was given narcotics in small quantities, but not of sufficient amount to satisfy her cravings.

Sergeant Schaeffer, husband of the "heiress," was inclined to doubt the existence of his wife's "English estate," from which she supposedly has been receiving money regularly. These sums invariably came through a millionaire candy manufacturer, represented to the husband as Mrs. Schaeffer's guardian and adviser in financial matters, according to Schaeffer.

Dry Agents Raid Shop
And Promote a Wedding

Man Held as Counterfeiter
Promises to Explain After Ceremony To-day

Prohibition Agents Charles Guttman and Harry Drescher are appearing in the roles of first aides to Cupid. It all began when the agents raided the engraving establishment of R. J. Atherly, twenty-four years old, at 110 East Twenty-third Street and found thirty-five electrolyte plates designed, the agents charge, to print counterfeit physicians' liquor prescription blanks and to watermark imitation United States Treasury paper.

The agents arrested Atherly on a charge of counterfeiting. Atherly told the agents that he soon was to be married to a beautiful twenty-year old girl, who knew all about him and was willing to take him for better or worse.

The agents believe that Atherly has made a fortune out of the engraving business, but Atherly denies it. The agents met the bride to be and she came along while Atherly was arraigned. "If you will let me get bond in the sum of $5,000, I can get the bail," Atherly is quoted as saying, "and then we can get married."

The agents agreed to this on the promise of Atherly to tell immediately after his marriage how he came into possession of the plates, for the manufacture of which Atherly disclaims all responsibility. Atherly will be married to-day.

IT is not sufficient to know that milk is rich in butter fat or that it comes from healthy cows and clean dairies.

Milk safety can only be assured through Perfect Pasteurization. We were the pioneers in the introduction of this protective measure and we have developed pasteurization to a point of efficiency that you will find only in a Sheffield plant.

We design and build our own pasteurizing equipment and no other device ever built can give the same degree of safety.

First Important Showing of

The New Fall Suits

We've sketched only three of them here—the new jacquette model; the three-piece costume that proved itself of enormous importance throughout the Paris showings; and an embroidered satin matelasse model distinguished with fur—but there are a variety of other styles disclosing other fascinating new silhouettes, new colors, new fabrics, new uses of furs. Priced from $75 to $595.

Selections should be made at once—these suits are the right weight for early fall wear and will be bought up rapidly.
